

Wines from Sicily

Sicily, the largest island in the Mediterranean sea, is today becoming the place in Italy for the production of high quality wines with intense character and qualities very often associated with "New World" wines.

Dry, rich in mineral salts, invigorating sunshine and a hot African wind allow grapes to perfectly ripen and hence produce great levels of sugar and rich ripe flavours and aromas

With a climate found only in the heart of the Mediterranean and a culture that reflects the soul of Italy, what better place to make wine?
